

Battery Product Sales in South America

Always looking to expand their customer base, Brentwood Industries has recently grown internationally by selling their battery products to customers in South America. Brentwood has been selling their industrial battery plate wrap material to all of the major manufacturers of these industrial-type batteries including battery operated fork lift trucks, mine cars, and locomotives.

Already with a client base in Canada, Mexico, and Africa, Brentwood has extended their reach over the last few years by selling their custom-made plate wrap material to battery manufacturers in Brazil and Peru. The newest major customer is located in Brazil and buys this material by the export container load multiple times per year.

Brentwood also makes and sells other parts contained within a battery like battery boots (plate rests), battery spacers, which are used within the uninterrupted power supply batteries, and other thermoformed parts used within a battery plant.
